THREE HEROES

DYNAMITE SQUAD THAT HAND- LED THE GUN COTTON

How the Flames were Checked by use of High Explosives

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Three heroes saved San Francisco—what is left of it. They were the dynamite squad that threw back the fire demon at Van Ness avenue.

When the burning city seemed doomed, and the flames lit the sky further and further to the west, Admiral Mc-Calla sent a trio of his most trusted men from Mare Island with orders to check the conflagration at any cost to life or property. With them they brought a ton and a half of gun-cotton.
The terrific power of the explosive was equal to the maniac determination of the fire.

Captain McBride was in charge of the squad. Chief Gunner Adamson placed the charges and the third gunner set them off.

The thunderous detonations to which the terrified city listened all that dreadful Friday night meant the salvation of 300,000 people. A million dollars worth of property, noble residences and worthless shacks, were blown to drifting dust, but that destruction broke the back of the fire and sent the raging flames over their own charred path.

Dynamite a Block Deep

The whole east side of Van Ness avenue from Golden Gate to Greenwich was dynamited a block deep, though most of the structures stood untouched by spark or cinder. Not one charge failed. Not one building stood upon its foundation. Not one unlit torch was left pointing skyward to carry the flames as through gi-gantic chimneys into the unburned district. Unless some second malicious miracle of nature reversed the direction of the brisk wind the whole populous district to the west, black with fleeing refugees and unillumi-nated except by the disastrous glare from the burning water front, seemed safe by 9 o'clock.

Van Ness avenue is flat as the earth on the east side. Every pound of gun-cotton did its work and though the ruins burned it was but feebly. From Golden Gate avenue north the fire swept across the wide street in but one place. That was the Claus Sperck-els place, on the corner of California street. There the flames were writing up the walls before the three dynam-iters could reach it. Yet they made their way to the foundations, carrying their explosives, despite the furnace-like heat. The charge had to be placed so swiftly and the fuse lit in such a hurry that the explosion was not quite successful from the trained viewpoint of the gunners. But though the walls still stood, it was only an empty victory for the fire, as bare brick and smoking ruins are poor food for flames.

Van Ness Not Hopeless

Captain MacBride's dynamiting squad realized that a stand was hopeless except on Van Ness avenue. They could have forced their explosives further in the burning section, but not a pound of gun-cotton could be or was wasted. The ruined block that met the wide thoroughfare formed a trench through the clustered structures that the conflagration, wild as it was could not leap. Engines pumping brine through Fort Mason from the bay completed the little work that the gun-cotton had left, but for three days the haggard-eyed firemen guarded the flickering ruins.

The desolate waste straight through the heart of the city is a mute witness to the most heroic and effective work of the whole calamity. Three men did this and when their work was over and what stood of the city rested quietly for the first time they departed as modestly as they had come.
They were ordered to save San Francisco, and they obeyed orders. Captain MacBride and his two gunners made history on that dreadful Friday night.
